ANOTHER HOOSIER PLAY

GUS THOMAS LOCATES THE SCENE OF HIS LATEST IN INDIANA.

Play Bills at the Local Theaters This Week—Strong Christmas Attractions Announced.

Augustus Thomas has come to Indiana again for the subject of his new play, "The Hoosier Doctor," and, according to S. Goodfriend, in Plays and Players, it is a success. In the new comedy, says Mr. Goodfriend, Augustus Thomas has written an original play of local character and color and invested it with the distinctive charm of humor and naturalness that distinguishes his various other comedies of a similar type, and, incidentally, has fitted Digby Bell with a delightful character, combining quaint pathos and humor that promises to place the one-time comic opera star in the front rank of American comedians. The play had its first performance before a large audience at the Newark, N. J., Theater last Saturday night, Dec. 5, and from the honest and hearty manifestations of approval the comedy won a favor whose sincerity could not be questioned. The play abounds in bright and witty lines and amusing situations, and they occur frequently enough to make the laughter continuous. The play deals with the fortunes of a good, simple, old Indiana doctor with three pretty young daughters and a mother-in-law, of whom he stands in deadly awe. He marries a pretty young woman secretly and makes surreptitious visits to her house at night, on the plea of visiting a patient. The neighbors notice the unusual proceedings at the young woman's house and the White Caps organize, attack the place during one of the doctor's visits and carry him off by force. The malefactors are deeply repentant after they learn of their mistake and keep the doctor busy the next day receiving contributions of household goods, clothes and other evidences of their good will. But as the doctor's severe treatment has led to his discovery of a plant which he needed for the perfection of a new medicinal compound at which he has been working, the White Caps succeed in every respect, and the play, none is to be made regarding Mr. Bell's performance. In the course of a speech demanded of Mr. Thomas after the second act, he said it was simply remarkable for an actor who had spent nearly a quarter of a century in comic opera, and to suddenly step into a role combining a peculiar blending of humor and pathos, and accomplishing it successfully in every respect. That, outside of Mr. Jefferson and Nat Goodwin, he knew of no American comedian who could portray pathos so tenderly, quietly and effectively.

Grand—"Sowing the Wind."

"Sowing the Wind" will be at the Grand to-morrow and Tuesday nights for its third Indianapolis engagement. It is a favorite play here as elsewhere. The story of the play is one of the most intensely interesting pieces of dramatic writing now before the public. Rosamond, a beautiful and dashing concert singer of London, is loved by Ned Annesley, a young man of good family and the adopted son of one Brabazon, an aristocratic old gentleman of rigid ideas and social cast. Brabazon, in his younger days, has been involved with a certain Helen Gray, whom he was not permitted to marry because of her lower position in the social scale. Their final separation occurred because the child was born and Brabazon never learned of the birth. Her mother drifted to the bad, while the girl, not aware of her own parentage, grew up to become a stage favorite. This is the girl whom Ned intends to wed. The old man objects and a strong scene follows between Brabazon and Rosamond, who turns out to be his own daughter. The closing scene is one of the most powerful pieces of emotional play-writing ever written, and the play, which has been a success in the development of the story. The play management, with May Hampton in the leading role. It is now produced with a new cast.

Park—"My Dad, the Devil."

Frank M. Wills, Monte Collins and Miss Norma Wills are a clever trio. In their new play, "My Dad, the Devil," they seem to have a winner. Three better artists never starred in the popular-priced houses. They have surrounded themselves with a good company, including James W. Bankson, late star in the "Private Secretary," Wilton Taylor, formerly leading man in "The Land of the Midnight Sun," Miss Gertrude Fort, who last season, played leading character roles with Peter Daily; Miss May Mitchell, who made a hit in the original production of "Dr. Bill"; Miss Fanny Fields, who in the "Old-Fashioned Irish Boy," is the cleverest of the stage today; Harry Rankin, James Bagley, Miss Sadie Spenger and Miss Jessie McCarthy. "My Dad, the Devil" will be at the Park to-morrow, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The Park has been doing a big business for two weeks past. The cinematograph and its spectacular introduction has been a source of amaze and delight to the audience every afternoon and evening.

The Park has the play that will be seen there. It is a four-act comedy drama and contains some effects and sensationalism. Among the latter is an explosion, a bicycle ride on an improved wheel, a ride on the cow, a locomotive, the rescue of a hero by the tramp, and a ride on the yardmaster Rasmussen Jack, commonly known as "Railroad Jack," one of the best of the stage today. The play is a rugged undercurrent of honesty and sincerity in his performance that makes it a spectacle of the highest order. The Park has a new play, "The Heart of Maryland," which is a small cup of strong black humor, and a certain success is predicted for the woman who has but one peer as a drawing card in Paris—Sarah Bernhardt.

New Cinematograph.

The new views which the cinematograph will show at the Park to-morrow and all this week include the following: Negro boys diving and swimming, Spanish artillery in action, a magnificent ocean scene in St. Petersburg, a French vaudeville artist in numerous characters, a boxing match, a parade in honor of the Czar in Paris, and other pictures of equal interest. The third week of the cinematograph promises to rival in interest and attendance the two preceding ones. There has not been a night during the past two weeks that the Park has not turned people away. People never tire of looking at the cinematograph pictures.

Christmas at the Theaters.

The Christmas attractions at the theaters are always a subject of interest each season. Indianapolis is well provided for this year in that regard. The Grand has E. M. and Joseph Holland, who open Christmas eve at that theater, and whose principal play is "A Social Highwayman," taken from the widely-read novel of that name. The lives of the Hollands have been devoted to acting, which is well provided for this year in that regard. The Grand has E.
